HELEN CORDOVA:

It's an incredibly humbling and an honor to be here receiving the first vaccine dose. So I'm just hopeful and encouraged that we're going to be putting a stop to this.

EDNA DERRICK:

And as we got into this virus, the more isolated I became after I got my vaccine, I feel a lot better about going to the store and see my friends and talking to my neighbors across the street and that sort of thing.

SHIRLEY WEBER:

It has been hard. To not be able to see my staff, to not always be able to see my family that I haven't seen in months, but this is the way out. And this is the way through it.

JIM ARMSTRONG:

One of the biggest concerns for me has been getting sick or being hospitalized or dying. Now that I'm vaccinated, I'm much more eager for the future - to being back at work, meeting with my students, having my daughter be able to go back to school.

HELEN CORDOVA:

I definitely feel a lot safer. My biggest fear was bringing something home to my mom. Knowing that I have that internal protection able to be more at ease as I care for her, for my patients.

ZAMIR MOEN:

The COVID vaccine is very, very safe. It's been used millions of times now, and we've been able to see this great change afterward with feelings of hope about getting over this pandemic.

KATHLEEN KIKUTA:

Don't hesitate and come out and get your shot. It's nothing compared to getting the coronavirus.

EDNA DERRICK:

If everybody gets the vaccine, we can feel a lot more like we can go places and do things, like things are getting back to normal. Normal sounds good to me.
