

Courtney Freeman, Kaiser Permanente Colorado member

When I was 37, I was diagnosed with breast cancer. Everything went so fast—my mammogram, ultrasound, and biopsy. I had a lumpectomy and then 6 weeks of radiation. I appreciate my oncologist so much. And when things got tough, I found comfort from a Kaiser Permanente support group. I'm cancer free now but still work with my oncologist and OB/GYN to monitor my Lynch Syndrome, and I feel like I'm in great hands.
