

- You may also be concerned that if you are infected with COVID-19 it may affect your baby.
- From what we know now, it does not appear that babies can get COVID-19 in the womb. However, babies can get infected after birth by being around infected family members.
- The CDC recommends minimizing baby's exposure to the virus by creating physical separation with anyone who's infected, wearing a mask when in close proximity, and washing hands frequently.
- Make these measures a part of your daily routine and limit family contact with the baby to just the parents or an essential caregiver. Now is not the time to show your baby off to others.